A. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to collapsible shelters and, more particularly, to a collapsible table assembly that is readily convertible between a table configuration and a wall configuration and also includes a windscreen for protecting the occupants of the table assembly from the wind. B. Description of the Prior Art The prior art is well documented with various types of collapsible shelters and, more particularly, with foldable or collapsible tables that have been developed for a wide variety of uses. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 1,796,231 to Udy discloses a collapsible table having a base frame that is folded into an upright wall structure and telescoping table extensions that are pivoted into table top position. U.S. Pat. No. 2,424,696 to Albin discloses a collapsible table having a foldable table top that is articulated to the side of a leg. The table top is supported by a pair of tubular column members that are pivotally connected at the ends to the leg. The legs may be folded or collapsed into a flat position by pivoting the column members and the table top to its retracted position and pivoting them back into an extended position. U.S. Pat. No. 4,715,641 to Markovski discloses a collapsible table having a base with a wall having a plurality of slots. A first frame is removably attached to the wall and can be slid in and out of the slots. The table top is attached to the first frame. The top is slidably supported by a second frame that is removably attached to the first frame. The second frame is slidably attached to the wall. The table assembly has an integral windscreen that is removably attachable to the wall. While the above-noted references are representative of collapsible table assemblies that are available in the prior art, none of the known collapsible table assemblies provides a table assembly 82157476af
