If you can find somebody to play with and take the time to learn the cards you will really enjoy this game. The game is good, the soundtrack is AMAZING. This soundtrack was hands down my best purchase from the 2015 Winter Sale. I think it has overtaken Electronic Super Joy as my favorite soundtrack.. Like VVVVVV adds a new twist to 2D platforming by restricting the mechanics in an interesting way, in this case limiting control to just two buttons. Manages to be manageable despite the high difficulty because of extremely generous checkpoints. A very good game that earned it's way to being one of my favorite indie games in recent memory.. The game needs a lot of work, from simple things like bugs and graphical glitches to large things like story inconsistencies, proper english, a proper tutorial and a better gameplay. The fact that the last update happened on May gives me very little hope for the future of this game. Of course, something may have happened to the Dev, and i wouldn't blame them for it, but be aware of how regular the updates really are when buying this game by taking this in mind. With that being said, the idea is quite interesting, and although it did remind me of "Papers, Please", It offered what i think is a fresh take in the "Be a government employee in a Dystopian Environment/Country" genre.

Still, i wouldn't recommend purchasing it now, not even in a sale. Perhaps a couple of updates from now i might reconsider my opinion.. The Next Door is an easy game to review because it has no substance. It is an aberration that is desperately striving to be abstraction. The only tangible thought one can come away with after experiencing it is just how poorly a video game can be made. Listing the flaws of The Next Door could indeed be a game in and of itself; incredibly uncomplicated puzzles, nauseating music that resounds in cursory loops, terribly designed and piercingly bright areas that burn out your retinae, awful player movement and interaction, the worst optimization imaginable and it takes thirty minutes to complete, due to the harsh content however, this is a blessing.

The Next Door will be forgotten quicker than it ends as you laugh and move onto the next game.

2V10. From the initial view I expected something similar to Settlers III, graphic and gameplay likewise, but was let down. The overall game is designed too slowly paced and too complicated at the same time. After planning a path for a road you need assign a worker to every single tile. The annoying part is that they have to return to the main building before you can assign them to another tile, giving the game the pace of a browser game like OGame or Farmerama. Basically you need to sit there and wait for your guys to return during the first minutes of the game, not able to do anything else. The explorer you need to locate new areas cannot be sent into unknown territory and sticks to the tiles, which slows him down alot as well.

So overall this game bores you before it even actually started to show you some and adds way too much micro management for a handful of buildings. Plus the english localization appears to be scrappy (missing words etc).. This game is unplayable. Great game, great concept but virtually unplayable in it's current state. It's riddled with bugs and is paced horribly. I still recommend buying it - when this thing is fully completed it's going to be glorious.. Cool little concept!. This game has no right to be as fun and amazing as it is... It's only $3, takes place on a farm and random floating chunks of earth in the sky which makes no sense why it's a farm, there a random mode where you shoot corn at each other in slow motion, and there's only three different weapons on one map... but it's just so much fun. I just got done playing a buddy for about an hour and forty minutes and we had a blast. Setting up a private lobby is easy.

It's not perfect though. A settings page would be amazing. We would rather use our own VOIP service like Discord/Teamspeak rather than the always on in-game voice (which could use a better, higher bit-rate codec). Also, a volume slider or music toggle button would be great since the always-on-at-max-volume setup right now makes it hard to hear your teammate. Using the SteamVR volume slider doesn't work since that also makes the VOIP quieter.

I have played Raw Data, Onward, Vanishing Realms, Google Earth VR, and so much more... and I really think this $3 game is my favorite VR game yet. It's crazy, but true.

I haven't played a whole lot of the "Caravan" sub-genre of shmups, but I'd venture this is probably one of the most manic among them. The basic game is pretty pure shmup fun, with good sound and eye-pleasing explosions of color and shiny medals. Optimal scoring probably requires memorizing the six hidden bonus item locations strewn across each of the 12 normal + ?? "Ura" levels, which (as far as I'm yet aware) cannot be revealed while using the "Grabuster/Gravastar" gimmick attack (which is a crucial element of scoring), meaning you might also need to plan taking bullets to pre-empt its activation during its pre-activation Baryon Laser phase (thusly cancelling warm-up by shunting Baryon Laser gauge into a shield hit) so as not to miss these bonuses. In short, if you want to obsessively optimize scoring and routing, there's probably a lot here for you. I probably won't dig that deep into this game, given that I can just barely clear it on 'Standard', but it's pretty neat. I'll probably be firing it up for runs long into the future.

(I might be wrong on the Grabuster bit, since even taking a shield hit denies you a bonus at the end of the level, but maybe the hidden items would compensate. I need to try extended hovering over hidden bonuses with it active.). Bought this under the impression that it would help the development of the game. We all know how that went.. So ummm... I bought this product from a bot that sells steam key...suprisingly..i made a good choices..this game is so relevant..it has only 3 Achievement to complete....Well That Was To Easy...anyway the game is good for you if you like puzzle game... i really recommend it...Nice. Caster is one of those games. You know the ones - you've got that one Steam friend who keeps buying and playing them as a joke, even though them being on Steam in 2019 has become commonplace to the point where they constitute the bulk of all the games ever released on the platform. That's right! It's somebody's first Unity project released as a commercial product on the largest digital video game storefront in the world! Caster is an impressive demonstration of this particular breed of laziness - enemies placed haphazardly around a barren, featureless landscape; the same visual and audio effects repeated ad nauseum; and a generally slapped-together quality that pervades the entire thing. All of these contributing to what is ultimately an impressive landmark in the history of games getting released as though they are anywhere approaching the standards for what anyone would consider acceptable even in 2009.

When I say barren, that's exactly what I mean. Every game to ever feature some sort of terrain editor has included tools to prevent exactly what's happening in Caster, itself a game of levels made exclusively with simple terrain tools. Thankfully, an upgradeable jumping skill allows you to Icarian Flight yourself across the entire map, eliminating exactly 100% of the challenge and purpose of playing in the first place. This was less of an issue for me than you might think, because when I was actually playing the game how I was supposed to, I found myself using overly simplistic weapons to kill the same bugs over and over again. All of these are very bad things, but the real descriptor you should be taking away from this experience is that Caster is just nothing at all, basically. A 20-minute hack job by someone who probably just wanted to grab some cash on the side.

Not only has Caster got so little going on that it makes Pac-Man look like a deeply challenging 4X strategy title, but it's representative of the overall creative pit that Steam is. Caster wasn't the genesis of the practice of dumping just anything on Steam and adding trading cards to grab a couple of dollars from a few thousand people - it's hardly notorious enough to do something so impactful - but it's certainly a shining example of how not to make a game. Hot tip of the day: if you don't have any ideas, don't just dump any old package of premade assets onto the store and hope to make back whatever Steam Direct's entry fee is today. Because it may seem like you've just earned a few dollars here and there and it's a win-win for you, but now that you've spewed this Steamy pile into existence you'll be inextricably linked to it forever. You've bricked your career in game design before it even started, and given what we're seeing here that's undoubtedly a good thing for the rest of us.. nice really really nice. 10/10 i dont think i've ever given a game 10/10 before.. Come for the Zombies

its a mix of full motion video with choice making and has 4 parts where you go fps*

long gameplay

my favorite game :)

i hope chapter 2 comes soon please :)

by the way full motion video games are when video game have video with people in it its kinda what your game has

if you guys hate this it because you have no taste in games it does not matter about grafhics idiots take the time too really play the game you might like it

i beat the hole game in 2 hours i think ama play it again :D
